Dominating the Field

By Morgan Sexton

Kate (Katie) Bekeritis doesn't just play sports, she dominates. An ambitious competitor, Katie has successfully tackled softball, basketball, and field hockey.

Although a loyal Ipswich softball team member, Katie also plays for the Angels, a 16u club team that is part of the USSSA fast pitch league. After playing 5 years in the Ipswich league, she decided she needed a change of pace and wanted more of a challenge. That's when she and the help of her family took softball to another level. More than most things, softball has given Katie a sense of thrill and excitement.

While waiting around for spring sports to begin, Katie keeps busy with basketball. Although she stands at a height of 5'3, she doesn't let that affect her. The past 4 years she has played basketball with dedication and heart. "I am small but fast, and I use that to my advantage," she said.

Despite joining field hockey later than most, she's thriving. While most girls begin playing in middle school, Katie joined this year as a freshman. She doesn't see the problem with starting later than others. "Why join now? Why not?" she said. In fact, Katie was eager to join. Strangely, Katie never saw the appeal of field hockey until this year when a friend brought it up to her. Usually, having a few friends on the team helps with bonding, but that can't happen this year. Limitations on socializing and team workouts make it hard to connect with teammates. "You get no time to get to know people just going to practices," she said. Unfortunately, COVID restrictions have made it harder than normal to enjoy sports for everyone.

In spite of the restrictions, Katie's not one to let sickness or injury keep her down for long. Last year she struggled with an injury. Her kneecap started going inwards which caused her a lot of pain. She went through hours of physical therapy from spring 2019 to fall 2019. Her recovery from injury brought her to an important realization: "It made me realize how much sports mean to me. It [her injury] made me feel like I had to recover because I wanted to play to my strengths." During this time, she was scared that she might not be able to play again, but she trusted the process and is now better than ever.

Without a knee injury holding her back, Katie wishes to continue building up her athletic career and dominating every sport she plays.

Building His Future

By Morgan Sexton

Headstrong, ambitious, and resourceful are just some words that describe James Jewell. But is he a role model? He doesn't think so, not yet at least.
Growing up James had a father that was into technology. From him James built, learned, and read all about technology from building with wood to wiring. He and his father have built many projects together, including the big screen used in the eighth grade graduation last year. According to him, it took "8 hours" of hard work to put together and was a long process. That's not the only thing James has built. He has made many pieces of furniture over the years, one including the desk he uses now. With his experience in woodwork, he has thought about building furniture for those in need in the future.

Clearly James is no newbie to hard work. In addition to building, he has won two Geography Bees and a baseball championship so far, and he's just getting started. He hopes to continue building up his achievements in robotics and golf with their annual competitions that take place in spring. Robotics and golf aren't the only competitions James hopes to win, he is aiming for a win in baseball as well. James hopes with dedication and hard work his team (the Ipswich JV Baseball Team) would win another championship.

How has he gotten to where he is today? He says that without his dad he wouldn't be the same, but his biggest influencer goes way back to second grade with his teacher Mrs. Speak. He claims she "helped me come up with questions" relating to the natural world and was overall a "great science teacher." Clearly she was if he is still affected by her years later.

So what's his future? Right now James is just trying to get through the pandemic but long term he plans on college. He hopes to have a career in "something related to engineering" but isn't sure yet. He also sees baseball in his future. He said that he has "grown to love it" over the years and have made some good friends in the process. He hopes to get a D1 offer but doesn't want to get ahead of himself because he wants to "focus on education because it is a priority to me." Realistically speaking, he hopes to get into D2 or D3 at a good school.

James's ambition and hard work has driven him over the years and will continue. In his path he will leave behind inspiration to those who need it - even though he might not think he is a role model.

Let's Dance!

By: Emma Bilo

Avery Armano was 4 years old when she began her journey in dance. When she first started she was not sure of her direction. She tried many styles before she found her passion at Marianas Dancing Studio in Ipswich. Avery has worked very hard and has won over 250 awards. Avery is in the top group at her dancing studio. She practices 18 hours a week, and on Saturdays she shares her love of dance with the twinkle toes, the newest and smallest dancers.

Avery's favorite dance style is acrobatics cause it helps her with her flexibility and she gets to learn new tricks. She is also taking Point, Ballet, Acro, Jazz, Temporary, Lyrical, Hip pop, and Ballroom. Avery never gets tired of dance. She believes dance is her way of "Expressing my emotions and it brings me a lot of joy. My studio friends have become family."

14 year old Hailey playing soccer for the town league.

Cousins in Common

By: Emma Bilo

Have you ever met someone and realized you share many things in common? Some people simply have a way of connecting, and others share more than just common interests they might not be aware of.

Hailey Fowler and I have a lot in common. We were on the same basketball team when we were at the YMCA.We both enjoyed hanging out at the beach this past summer. After talking for a while we realized we aren't just friends; we're also cousins.

My grandfather and Hailey's grandmother are cousins, and grew up on Balcomb street in Salem, MA in the same house. As Hailey said, "boy it's a small world." Not only are we friends, but we play sports together and are related.

Although Hailey remembers playing basketball with me and having a blast, she truly loves playing lacrosse and soccer. The day Hailey Fowler stepped foot onto the field, she knew soccer and lacrosse were her sports. She has been playing soccer for 11 years and still loves it.

This year Hailey is on the JV soccer team and plays midfield offense. She already has one goal top her credit and hopes to score many more. Hailey thinks "Having to wear a mask is terrible. I can barely breath under it."

Masks aside, she's still looking forward to playing lacrosse this year like she has for the last 10 years. She had hoped to make varsity last year, but with all the Covid-19 stuff, she never even got to step foot onto the field.
In addition to enjoying sports, Hailey also has had the luxury of having access to the ocean and boating life. "Going on the boat is my happy place!" Hailey said.

During the summers off she enjoys going to the sandbars,visiting the house boats, and fishing. The largest fish she has ever caught was an 18 inch striped bass. As much as she loves fishing, "Baiting the hook is gross," she said.

Interviewing Hailey made me realize it's great to have so much in common, but it's not every day you find out your good friends are also your cousins.

McGowan's Got It

by Lexi James

Brad McGowan is not only a great baseball player, but also very studious. "Brad is a very quiet kid but is always the go to man when it comes to class discussions," one of his teachers said. "Whatever he says is always smart and on the money."

Brad takes that intelligence and brings it onto the ball field as he steps into his position, 2nd base. "Baseball came easy to me when I was younger. As I got older I started to enjoy it more and more. It is very different from other sports, which is why it is my favorite.

Brad isn't only the go to man in the classroom, but is a big help on the field too. He is a utility player, so coaches can use him anywhere and he will know exactly what to do.

Along with Brad's talents on the baseball diamond, he also snowboards, which takes a lot of mental and physical skill. Brad has been hitting jumps and carving the slopes for years. When he's not snowboarding or playing baseball, Brad goes clamming, which is back-breaking work. McGowan learned how to have fun while also earning money.

While his extra curricular activities might not turn into a career, his versatility and work ethic will no doubt carry him far in life.

Bold Moves and Fresh Faces

By Lexi James

Although Bella doesn't play any high school sports for the school, she participates in competitive dance for Mariana's Dancing Studio. Bella has been dancing at this studio for 9 years. She has always been one of their top performers and never fails to place in her competitions. She has earned over 20 awards through her phenomenal journey as a dancer. Her favorite trick to do is an "a la second" turn because she says simply put, "It's fun."

Bella does many different styles of dance, but her favorite is lyrical. She likes lyrical the best because it's fun, outgoing and full of tricks. Lyrical is a type of dance where you do a bunch of tricks during your performance. Bella says "I like to perform lyrical because I believe it's the style of dance I'm better at." Along with dance, Bella also enjoys snowboarding and skiing with her family during the winter at Waterville Valley.

Sports: A Family Affair

by Bella Sciretto

If you ask any person how they would describe Lexi James, I'm positive they would all say the same thing: she's a kind, hard working, sports-loving girl.

Lexi has been playing field hockey for 5 years. She loves the thrill of the game and the push of the exercise. She has practice every day after school, but you will never hear her complain about going.

Lexi's favorite team to play against is usually Hamilton Wenham, because they are the Ipswich Tigers rivals. However, this year the girls field hockey team played against Manchester Essex and beat them for the first time in years. Way to go girls!

Whenever someone asks Lexi why she loves sports so much, she always says, "Sports just run in my family." When Lexi's mom was in high school she was a field hockey star. She was exactly like Lexi, and her mom loves that Lexi is following in her footsteps. Lexi isn't the only Ipswich sports connections in the family. Her older brother Cam was the Ipswich Tigers football quarterback. Many will tell you that he is an all star just like Lexi.

Mack's Back

By: Ava Horsman

On Friday, September 13, 2019, Jack Macklin walked onto the field as a starting junior on the defensive line. Little did he know, that would be the last time he saw the turf for months.

On that cool September night, Jack and the team had started off the game on fire, but things quickly changed. In one play, Jack took the field as a defensive tackle, and unfortunately got knocked down, hard. “I figured I had blacked out, cause I woke to a teammate yelling my name,” Macklin says.

Jack got up and finished the play, exiting the field when the drive ended. “Once the drive ended and I came out, I couldn’t even walk in a straight line. That’s when people realized I was seriously hurt. I never went back in after that.”

Macklin ended up at Beverly Hospital the following morning, and then was transferred to Children's Hospital. “They knew something was wrong when I had no strength in my hands. I couldn’t grab anything. I ended up having a concussion, a brain bleed, and a herniated disk in my spine,” Macklin states. “My immediate thought was football. Right then and there was the moment I realized my season was over.”

Football was everything to Jack, it’s what kept him motivated and grounded, and pushed him to be the very best version of himself. “I didn’t really know life without football. It was that love-hate relationship. I loved every single thing about it, but at times it was so hard. All those hard times were worth it though, it pushed me to be better and the team is like family to me.”

Macklin spent the remainder of the season and that upcoming winter out of sports, healing in hopes of playing his fourth and final year of high school football. “It’s tough to see my senior season being taken away after getting over an injury like that,” Macklin says, after discussing the hopes of this fall.

Macklin and the boys plan on playing in the ‘Fall 2.0’ season, which starts in February. “ It's hard to think about covid potentially taking away the football season. It hasn’t really happened to any other class before ours.” He’s not alone. Jack is just one of the many seniors on the IHS football team, and they haven’t lost all hope just yet. “I plan on playing to the best of my ability this season, whenever that may be.”

A Life of Cheer

by Ashley Smith

When you grow up and spend your whole life looking up to someone, it's hard to not follow in their footsteps. Reilly Coughlin has spent her whole childhood looking up to her older sister, Cassidy Rich.

From the minute she was born, Reilly Coughlin has been involved in the sport of cheerleading. "I was going to competitions and games, so I grew up in this cheerleader life. I was just destined to become one," said Coughlin. Reilly has been cheering since the 5th grade, and has stuck with it for 8 years.

"It feels like it's in my blood to be a cheerleader. I've just always grown up around cheer and I wouldn't change it for anything," she said. Once Reilly reached high school cheer, she found that she was the only senior joining the team. Reilly says that the biggest challenge she faced during her cheer career was people questioning her ability because she was the youngest one and the only person on the team in her class. "I didn't know that practices were going to be so hardcore, and I didn't realize how painful Saturday morning practices would be after a football game, and I didn't realize how hard captain's practices would be mentally and physically," she said.

Reilly's first year cheering on IHSVC wasn't all that she hoped it would be. "When I was an underclassman it wasn't a welcoming environment," she said. Reilly decided to make it her personal mission when she became captain to be "the fun, welcoming captain that cheer was supposed to have, because it wasn't like that for a long time."

Reilly has made it her goal to make everyone feel comfortable. She always likes to be open with everyone she meets and makes sure to treat them with kindness. "The people who need kindness the most are the people who don't give it enough. Be the person that everyone needs," said Coughlin.

Reilly will continue to carry everything she learned from her sister and cheer with her throughout her life to hopefully make the world a little bit kinder.

Time to Run

by Sara Koerber

Amelia Stacy has only been running for 2 years, but she is already one of the top runners on her team. She is a true athlete for Ipswich doing swim, lacrosse, and cross country.

When Amelia started out, she somewhat felt like an outsider due to not running cross country or track in middle school. However, she soon after realized what a great team she was a part of. "I love cross country and the amazing friendships I have made through it," she said. She even overcame one of her challenges and learned to become friends with everyone, even the opponents on opposite teams. Even though she loves cross country, it is still "a bit different and challenging this year". We all know that coronavirus has drastically changed sports this year in different ways for everyone, and all athletes are still trying to get used to it. But for Amelia, the hardest parts were to wear a mask while running, and that she can't connect with her teammates like they did last year. "It's weird to be so far apart from my teammates all the time, and we cant even do team dinners this year, and it's not as easy to bond with the team," she said, "but everyone has done a really good job at making it work."

Many expect great athletes like Amelia to be solely focused on being number one, but not Amelia. "Yeah, it feels great to win, but my favorite part is practicing with my team and my coach. It's not about being competitive, It's about being a part of the team and having fun," she said. But even with being a great athlete, she still has her challenges and goals that she has yet to reach. Amelia's goal for the season is to beat her personal best, which impressively, she successfully did by 30 seconds. Despite such success, she still wants to continue to drop her time and "be the best I can be," she said.

Along with being a great athlete, Amelia is also a great musician, friend, and family member. Amelia plays the cello for the school for five years, and loves it. Another thing she loves is art. She isn't a major artist, but she paints as a hobby in her free time. Amelia also loves being around family and friends. Her friends are her favorite people to be around and she always has something fun to do with them. Her brother recently went off to college, but she says "that it just made us closer than we were before." Why cross country? Her dad was the reason she started running. She wasn't sure about running, but her dad is a cross country coach, and he inspired her to try it. Fortunately, she's happy she did. For the time being, she'll keep on running into the future.

Cold weather, masks, and tents everywhere, was not what senior, Rex Geller, expected to see this cross country season, through some things haven't changed

"It is fun, we are all having a good time and we are all good friends and we all work hard together," said Rex. Geller, a Senior cross country runner this year has a lot of gripes about the way things are unfolding this year. But it's not all bad.

"We're one big unit that works together," said Rex. Their friendship and bonds are obvious by the way their practices are run. But meets, however, are set up differently. "It's kind of weird that we're not allowed to have as many people [at meets]. Normally we would just have one meet and all the teams and people would be [there] but now we have just like ten and ten." Though running meets this way is strange, along with many other things, the team still bonds with one another.

Another change, but not such a bad one in Rex's view, is the new blood on the team. Underclassmen runners have been a great addition. "Will shows huge improvement every day. He's already a number 3 or number 4 runner as a freshman." The fresh meat on the team doesn't stop the team from getting into a little bit of mischief at the meets and practices.

One story Rex says will make him relish his days as a cross country runner is a story of him and his teammate cheering on the girls as they run, "We were at Amesbury and the girls were running and we were cheering them on, like on the course. Then for some reason Toby pulled out a huge fallen tree branch, and then we all just picked it up and put it on our shoulders and carried it for like a mile." said Rex, this event was not just a funny and memorable moment, but "it really showed the type of bond that we had as a team that we can make the randomest things comical."

Rex concludes that his senior year running with cross country had some struggles due to Corona but that did not stop his team from bonding and becoming one big group of friends.

Soccer Sisters

by Cassidy Smith

"The sister showdown when we go up with each other is entertaining," said Isabelle. That is what she hears from her coach when she practices with her younger sister, Victoria. When asked if they really had any sibling rivalry, both Harper sisters agreed they weren't that competitive… but who knows if that's really the case. However, this "rivalry" is more like motivation to make each other better; always trying to do better than the other when shooting. Plus, they can give each other brutally honest feedback.

Isabelle and Victoria grew up playing soccer together. Despite tripping over their feet while running in the grass, they both knew from an early age this is something they love doing together. Victoria would even show up at her older sister's practices when they were just starting out. "I remember my teammates saying 'wow Isabelle! Your sister's really good!'" This is thanks to the hours they spent with each other running around with a ball in the backyard.

Two years apart, they were never on the same team when they were little. Because of that, they often played the same kids in their age gap, but never each other - at least until High School. Now, they play on varsity together. After going through the same program all these years, "it's really cool to finally be playing together, even if it's only for two years," said Victoria.

To the sisters, the best part of being on a team together is being able to hype each other up on the car ride to the game, bass booming when they pull up to the track. Blasting music and singing on the top of their lungs the whole trip from their house gets their energy up.

Hyping each other up is especially important during covid when it's harder to have the drive to push yourself. Over the summer, Isabelle and Victoria both kept each other in check though, since if one sister went to practice, the other had an incentive to go as well.

Not only is it fun, but being on the team together improves their playing, communication, and bonding. The strong duo is able to lead their cohort during practices, pushing not only each other, but everyone to do better. Because they're from different grades, this also helps to connect the underclassmen and upperclassmen. Sadly, in future years, the upperclassmen will be missed. "Losing all of the senior class is gonna be hard on our team," said Victoria. Despite going off to college, Isabelle still hopes to go and support her sister and the team in future years.

Nothing is Four Sure

by Riley Daly

In the midst of a global pandemic everything is fluid and there are no guarantees. But what has held fast is the inseparable friendship between Jake Scruton, Cooper Norton, John Werner and Domenic Morello. These four boys have grown closer since their freshman year through many ups and downs, but nothing could prepare them for the drastic events that were going to unfold during their last season ever playing together.

This year's soccer season differs from any other. With new rules and new adjustments, the boys have had to rely on each other. "There's a lot more unpredictable things that could happen and we play every game hard because we don't know if it's going to be our last," said Cooper.

Domenic, John, and Cooper have been friends and soccer teammates since 3rd grade. Jake joined them in 9th grade when he moved from Georgetown and became one of the strongest assets to the team. With soccer as their common denominator, they grew closer together over time, preparing them to be each other's support systems through their confusing and difficult last year together. "It's nice to be able to have someone to talk to because we are friends and can vent to each other. We understand each other and we have similar struggles with soccer," said Jake.

They help each other through struggles - soccer related or not. Every day they work through different obstacles that come their way during the season. "I think having friends during corona in general and during the soccer season is a big coping thing for me at least. It's good to get out and spend time with friends like Cooper and Jake and Dom," said John.

The boys show their strength and hope using new rules to their benefit. It also helps to constantly look for the silver lining."I think future underclassmen are going to be a lot better with their soccer skills and footwork because of the no contact rule and how it makes you focus on the other aspects of soccer," says Domenic.

The boys are great leaders of the soccer program. Perhaps most notably, they have shown underclassmen how it's possible to make do with what you have and to look on the bright side. Even though they lost their spring seasons last year and all have been affected outside of school by the pandemic, they haven't allowed it to discourage them from being the best role models that they could be. More importantly, they didn't let anything come between them as friends. As the soccer season and their senior year comes to an end, the four boys will all go their separate ways in life, but no matter what the future may hold for them, the friendships and memories they have made on and off the field will forever hold its ground.

Shutting Down Shots

By: Kayden Flather

It was 2016 when Morgan Bodwell promptly stepped aside and volunteered one of her teammates to play field hockey goalie for that day's game. A defender through and through, Morgan had grown to love making stops in the open field

Fast forward four years, and Morgan finds herself playing the position she avoided, because it "freaked her out," and that she believed to be "boring. Now, however, Morgan puts on the bulky pads and leads her team to victory.

Although it's a big change, Morgan is content in goal. She feels "like a beast" every time she makes a stop and loves how "I get to oversee everything during the game and even though I'm not technically on the field. I feel like a powerhouse."

Playing goalie is very unique in the sense that when playing, you have the ability to control the mood and outcome of a game with great saves or goals you let in. A good save by a team's goalie can excite the rest of the team and push them to try harder and give one hundred percent. Consequently, a lot of goalies put incredible pressure on themselves to stop the ball. Morgan sees the ball as "a bullet that I have to stop," in order to motivate herself to save it.

After playing goalie for three years now, Morgan has made some unforgettable memories. In 2020, pandemic and all, the Ipswich Varsity Field Hockey team beat their rivals, Manchester Essex, 2-1 for the first time since 2014. "It was one of my favorite games - I made 8 saves," she said. In the final 15 minutes, Morgan had to make 3 of her 8 saves to ensure the win, including her last save with only 45 seconds remaining.

Suffice it to say, it was a lucky day for Ipswich field hockey when Morgan was finally forced to face her fear and step up into the goal. What keeps her content playing goalie? "Is not the look, that's for sure," she said. But one thing is for sure: If a shot's coming her way, she's going to stop it.

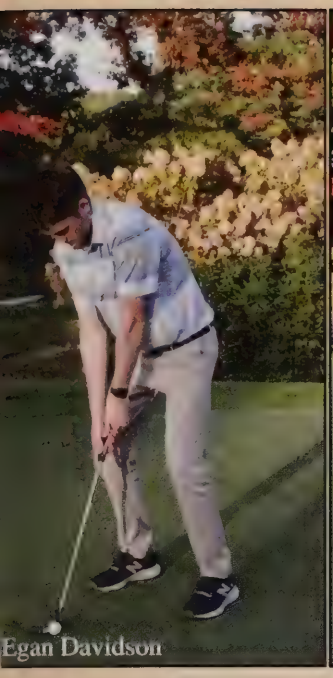
O'Flynn for the Win

By Rowan Silva



Egan Davidson

Rowan Silva

Egan Davidson and Rowan Silva work on their putting.

Many sports throughout the world are very similar. Soccer, hockey, and lacrosse have a net and a goalie to shoot past in order to score. Football and rugby have an end zone, where you run the ball in to score a touchdown in order to get points. All of these sports require the most amount of points to be scored in order to win the game or match. However, one sport requires the least amount of points to win: golf. While Aidan O'Flynn is used to scoring a lot of points in other sports, and even on his quizzes and tests in school, but he has had to get used to scoring as few points as possible on the golf course.

Aidan is one of the captains of the golf team, and has been surrounded by golf and many other sports for most of his life. "My grandparents brought him out onto the golf course at Turner Hill when I was younger, but I did not start playing golf competitively until junior year," said Aidan. Aidan has always been a standout athlete, and was originally planning on attending Pingree at the start of his freshman year to play on their football, basketball, and baseball teams. Unfortunately, he tore his ACL for a second time in a pre-season football practice. This being Aidan's second ACL tear in the same leg, it was too great a risk to continue playing football or any serious contact sport, so when Aidan returned to in search of a new sport, he decided to join the golf team.

In order to be a good golfer and get good scores on the course, competitors have to have a lot of mental skill. "You need to have a lot of mental toughness," said Aidan. "You always need to be able to refocus yourself after a bad shot." Aidan always visualizes his shot before he hits it, so that he can get a good idea of where his shot will go. He makes sure to always be confident when he hits the ball, and to not have any negative thoughts about it. If Aidan has a bad hole, he makes sure to keep that mental toughness, not get frustrated about it, forget about it and move onto the next one.

To be a team captain, you have to show great leadership to your teammates and coaches, which is exactly what Aidan does. "If you are a captain, you have to be a great role model to the younger players," says Aidan. Aidan is always willing to help his teammates out with their game in order to make them better golfers. He makes sure to always be open to any questions or concerns that his teammates have, whether it involves golf or not.

When Aidan is not on the golf course, you can find him "kickin' it with his friends," in the gym, or grinding out schoolwork. "I make sure to get most of his schoolwork done on the weekdays, so that I have time to enjoy the weekends."

With the circumstances this year, it has been hard for Aidan to get on the course in the spring and work on his game to get ready for the season. But "golf is a perfect COVID-era sport," says Aidan. Aidan and the rest of the golf team has been fortunate enough to be able to have a season without any problems.

Lasting Legacy

by Alexandra Albanese

Senior Riley Daily is no stranger to sports. She plays three throughout the year. Even though her favorite sport is lacrosse, and she plans to play in college as a UConn Husky, winter is basketball season for Riley.

Balancing time for sports and a busy schedule is a challenge for most athletes, including Riley. Does it make her life stressful? "Definitely. Basketball is at night, usually from 6-8, and that's prime homework time, which adds to my stress. I love playing sports. It's something I choose to do and like to do, and schoolwork is kind of a drag, and we have late nights and that kind of stuff. Big tests and midterms are during basketball season, so late practices stink."

The captain of a team should be a great player, and Riley's no slouch. But being captain extends beyond skills on the court. "My biggest thing is being a leader by being responsible and setting a good example. On and off the court you have to act like you represent Ipswich High School wherever you go," she said.

Riley comes from a family of MVP's. Both of her parents were good basketball players. Her mother and father are in the Ipswich Schools Hall of Fame along with her brother Aaron and sister Kelsey. Riley hopes to be there in the near future. Riley's parents have their children's high school life planned. They were born four years apart, so they each had their own chance to shine. She says her family is super supportive about everything.

Like most of us, she has goals. She wants to do well in college and major in business and communications.

Riley's love for basketball didn't develop overnight. She can still remember the first time she played in the YMCA league with a good friend. Her experience at the YMCA brought a lot of friends into her life and helped develop her mental toughness and athletic ability. Riley has an amazing bond with her team and believes "The basketball team is amazing. Everyone's nice and there are never any issues. The coaches are the best and everything is awesome."

During her final year of high school she's been working at Ipswich's Hart House. Their best dessert item? Large baked cookies with ice cream on top followed by a close second, their pumpkin cheesecake. While cookies and cake taste great, victory on the court is sweeter. Riley can't wait to play college ball and experience all that comes with being of a team at the next level. Although leaving Ipswich will be bittersweet, she can always come back and enjoy some yummy dessert at the Hart House.

Silva Strikes Again

By: Caroline Spencer

Some think hockey is just 'another winter sport' but Rowan Silva takes it to another level. Whether it's winter or summer, at a rink or on a pond, he is rarely off the ice.

As a senior, Rowan has had three successful years of high school hockey, and he is very excited for his final year.

Rowan started playing hockey in 4th grade on both club and school teams.Throughout his years on the ice, he has accomplished many goals and continues to work hard. His dedication and work ethic have earned him a Captain title of the tri-town team, which draws talent from Ipswich, Rockport, and Manchester.

As captain, Rowan has become a role model to the underclassman and the rest of his teammates. He wants to help his teammates be successful even after he moves on to college. Rowan has created many friendships and bonds with his teammates and coaches. With given being the captain of the team, he has a great group of boys behind his back. There are never any problems between the team and he claims he has a "skilled group of underclassmen," in which he hopes they can move on and still stick together as the senior class leaves.

Rowan's interest in hockey has grown because it is fast paced and physical. He plays center on the ice and he enjoys this position because he likes taking faceoffs and being close to the offense and third defensemen. Rowan adds that, "It's fun being a part of both," because he is the play maker and it's fun to be put on the spot.

When Rowan loses a game his practices get harder. If you lose by a lot it includes a lot of skating. "Losing wants to make you do better, and if you come off a big loss, you can't hang your head. You have to regroup. Be good mentally so it doesn't bring you down," he said. If he makes a bad play or doesn't like what he has done, Rowan moves past it because "if you think about it again you're going to keep doing the wrong thing."

As is true with all sports, winning in hockey feels good. "Winning is a good feeling, especially a big game. The boys are hyped and the music going. The practices after are so much fun and it feels awesome. It's an accomplishment and after your practice you showed it in the game and you ended up winning." Rowan said moments like these are memorable especially when, "it's a team win because everyone was involved. Wins will get you more excited for the upcoming game." And one of these memorable moments was when they beat Shawsheen Tech 2-1 in the regular season.

As Rowan moves forward onto college, he plans to pursue a major in sports communication or sports management. He will leave school hockey behind, but possibly play on a club team. "I will miss my teammates and the underclassmen, the coaches, and beating the good teams," he said. Amazingly, he even said he will miss the early morning practices. His bigger goal in life (other than hockey) for his ongoing journey is to keep scoring goals in life even if it isn't on the ice. In which he hopes it is for getting a job on the management staff of a professional sports team or to become a radio show host.

The UConn Dream

Last winter, Riley Daly received a very important call; she had earned a spot on the University of Connecticut's Division One lacrosse team, a goal she had been working to achieve since she was a little girl. After Riley was told by adults she would never accomplish such a goal, she used their criticism as fuel and channeled it into success.

The first step in the recruiting process is attending showcases and getting yourself out there. The hardest part of the process is "waiting, the nerves, not knowing anyone, and proving to the coach you belong on the field with everyone else," Riley explained. However, Riley knows how to calm her nerves and play the best she can in any situation. Attending a showcase means you are playing lacrosse with people better than you, so Riley "finds the best girl on the field and learns from them. It is better to play up because playing down doesn't benefit me." She has to work hard and stay strong, but the hardships are all worth it in the end.

Unfortunately, failure and mistakes are inevitable when working toward a goal. Riley admitted she is "bad at taking failure and that is where the nerves come in at showcases." However, Riley understands she is going to make mistakes, but never drops her head and continues to push through. She tells herself to "get the ball back and show the coaches you can make up for your mistake." Riley's family, friends, and teammates are crucial to her success. They are always there to cheer her up and encourage her when she needs it the most. They "won't let her slip through the cracks."

The phone call Riley received from her future coach was the best day of her life. She listened intently to what her coach had to say as she paced around her kitchen. The past few years had been so stressful because she had to work hard in school to get the perfect GPA and seek out showcases to be noticed. Her efforts were worth it and it was the happiest moment of her life to have a spot on the team. She was proud of herself and her family for not giving up on her. When asked about her experience, "I would do it again," Riley said cheerfully.

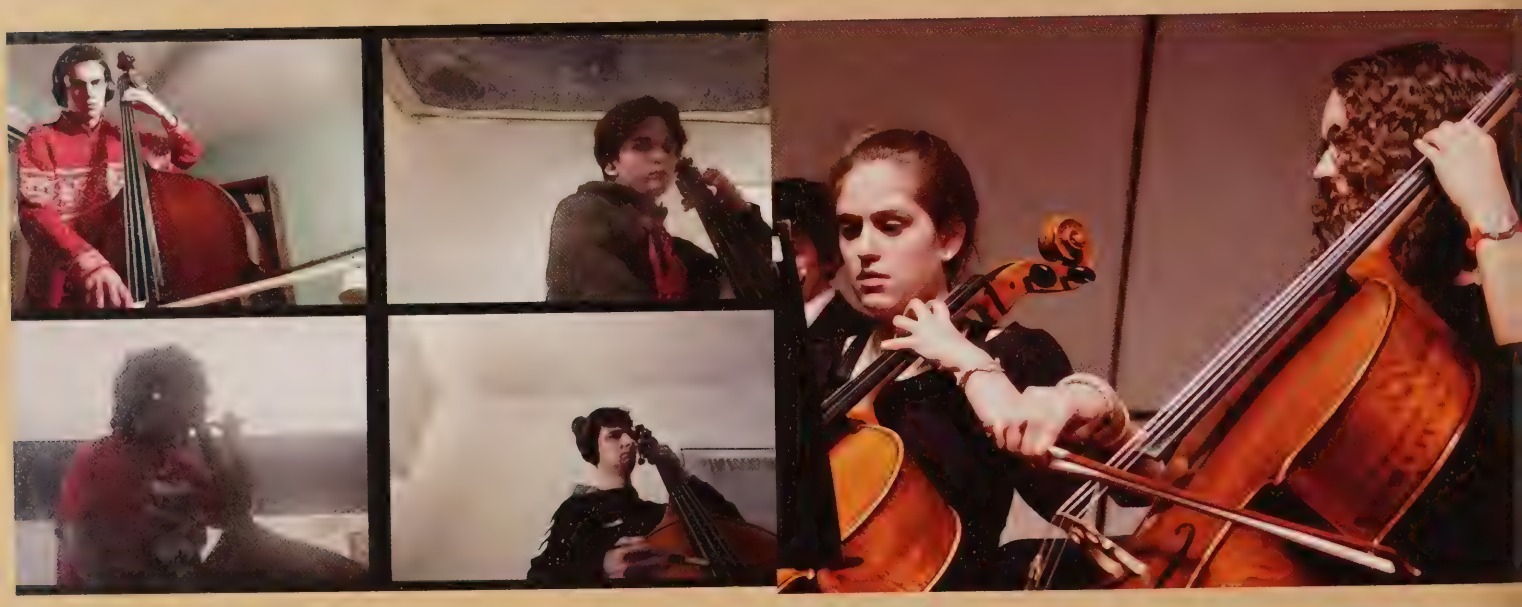
The Way Things Were...



Stringing It Together

By Jennie Tarr

Even though remote learning means more distance, it brings us closer together. Junior violinist Paul Wertz explained, "It's been a big change, but Mr. Coelho has done a really good job in making the atmosphere as close to normalcy as possible, maybe even better." From introducing students to advanced tools like metronomes to giving the experience of individual performance, hybrid Orchestra has brought great opportunity to these Musicians. Many instrumentalists have felt that the new change gives them more time to dive deep on their own skill sets. For example, Senior Violinist Angelina Rix agrees. "It has helped me focus more on what I need to improve on as an individual player," she said.

Although virtual orchestra has its benefits, the sudden adjustment has brought on just as many challenges. Angelina explains how the transition requires more self reliance as there aren't other people playing nearby to follow. Paul admits that it tests his abilities because it is more difficult to learn music when you are not getting the "face-to-face connection with the sound."

These obstacles have brought the necessity for adaptation to new methods, skills, and attitude to being a musician. However, what has not changed and will forever stay the same is the extravagant performance, whether online or live, the orchestra team puts together each year. "Mr. Coelho puts together these beautiful virtual performances that bring tears to my parents eyes," says Paul Wertz. Out of all of the noteworthy parts of orchestra, what could possibly be a musicians favorite aspect? To Paul, "Just getting to physically feel the emotion of the music and being in the moment. Moving as one with the notes makes all my hard work worthwhile!" Orchestra students look forward to being able to return to orchestra normalcy in due time, but for now, they are making unforgettable memories and grasping new takeaways for learning that they would have never been able to before.

"No matter the amount of work and dedication, we always come together and make magic!" ~Jaedan Parker

Choir on the Wire

by Jennie Tarr

Before the Covid Outbreak, being a member of the IHS High school Choir already had its challenges. According to Junior singer Jaedan Parker, "It was always a struggle to keep on track with all the songs and stay on task while not getting overly frustrated with myself and peers." Their great talent was met with great expectations. Members were given new music content weekly and expected to sing to their highest potential in class.

This year, with the new addition of online school, the expectation and hardships have doubled. Now completely online, Jaedan says her experience "Has been a challenge. Dealing with technical difficulties, in a way, has brought us all together." Inevitably, music unites people. No matter the different place or situation you are in, if you listen closely and feel the moment, appreciating every breathtaking sound, we all resonate with harmony.

Jaedan emphasizes that while it is difficult to harmonize remotely, she has found confidence as the environment forces her to face her own errors. "If I'm singing something wrong, it's nobody else's fault, it's my own. Isolation makes it easier to spot the problem and fix it." This may sound tough, but candid self-reflection is necessary for true growth. Other barriers choir members have persevered through are the complications that come with singing while wearing a mask and the constant absences due to illnesses. It is critical now more than ever for students to intensify their dedication to music as more effort is asked from them than usual.

Virtual chorus has brought both a new experience and opportunity to shape each students' identity as a performer and help them to evolve. Jaedan reflects on her growth as not only a student but as an individual due to the new conditions. She explains, "It's interesting because they say you are a different person at school than outside. Right now I'm out of school while I'm also in, so it has been quite eye opening to take a step back and face all of my strengths and weaknesses." Students have had to completely shift their ways of learning and, for ones like Jaedan, this has made it possible to redefine who they are as a vocalist.

In a nutshell, the silver lining is that music still unifies us in those moments we listen, feel, and appreciate it together. Despite hard times, music can be the bridge to bring back that connection we are all so desperately missing.

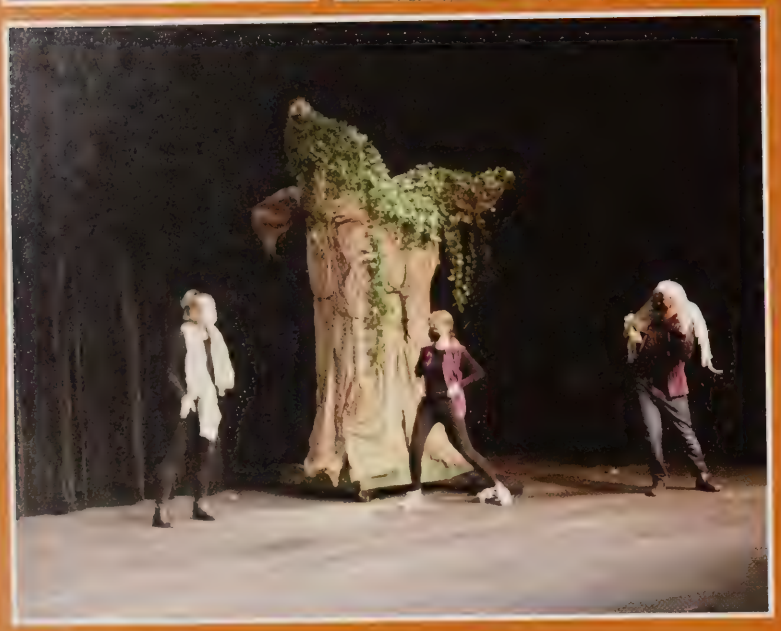
THEATER

THE COMPANY



Girl 4 to The Door

By: Ella Crudele

All actors understand what it means when they hear "5 minutes to call." Just as the director calls the actors to perform, Jess Murphy felt called to acting from a young age.

Jess has been involved in theater since 7th grade. She started off playing Girl #4 and has since played several leads in both plays and musicals, including Erma in Anything Goes! and Grace in The Door, which won her offers from many prestigious acting schools across the country.

Progressing through the increasingly difficult roles wasn't easy, but it was certainly rewarding. "Going from Girl #4 to such an impactful role as Grace was shocking, but incredible. Grace is a role that will always be one of my favorites." It isn't, however, the only role she'll remember from her time as a member of The Company at IHS. Currently the president and Company assistant in the theater department at IHS, Jess has also served as vice president. But her biggest breakthrough came at the end of last year.

In February 2020, The Company at IHS competed in the Massachusetts Thespian Festival, and their show The Door won several awards, including the chance to perform at an international festival in Indiana. Sadly, due to COVID, the festival was held virtually. Able to audition for several schools, Jess won big scholarships and many offers from several, including New York Conservatory, The American Academy of Dramatic Arts, New York Film Academy, and Studio School L.A. Jess said that "The Door advancing to nationals was huge, and when I could audition for the colleges months before they officially opened was something I couldn't pass up. Luckily, I guess they saw something they liked."

Jess plans to go into the film industry, which is something she's dreamed of from a young age. A big part of her life, she'd love to find a career in film and TV. She's always loved watching movies and TV shows. "I always saw stories on TV - from slaying monsters, to surviving horrible events, to falling in love. I always thought 'How could I do that if I only have one life?' The answer was obvious: act like it's not just one."
Jess has had many role models including Eddie Redmayne and Johnny Depp. She amdires them because of their diverse roles and commitment to their craft. Although she realizes going into the acting industry can be a risk due to its competitiveness, it is truly what makes her happy and she knows it will be worth it.

The Environmental Club meets monthly as a large and smaller sub committee groups also meets every other Friday to discuss more specific goals. The club works on planning projects to help spread environmental activism through going to protests and trying to make IHS a greener establishment. The Environmental Club has been involved in a variety of projects including workshops with the elementary schools, encouraging sustainable crafts and lifestyle planting a rain garden at IHS, participating in climate cafes in our area, and planning to add solar panels to the roof of the school. They also have done extensive research on how IHS can have its own composting facility. Come visit the Environmental Club and be a part of the great work they do to protect and preserve our environment!

CHAMELEON

Whether scrolling on Instagram or simply walking by Ms. P's room, you've certainly come across an advertisement begging you to submit to the Chameleon. The Chameleon is a publication of written works by IHS students. Members of Chameleon work on advertising to get the word out about the publication and to get students' submissions. They also do some writing themselves from time to time. The class compiles the submissions and decides which pieces they would like to publish, making an interesting final product of works from many different students. If you're interested in working on the Chameleon, you should definitely consider taking Ms. P's fiction or poetry class!

GLOBAL LANGUAGES

Every Friday morning, the Global Languages Club gets together in Ms. Killian's room to find new ways to raise money for important international causes. One of their main causes is supporting the education of young children in third world countries. Members of the Global Languages club like to know they are improving the environment of the school as well as making a positive impact on the world in general. They work toward many important causes and encourage you to get involved!

MODEL UN

Model United Nations is a club where students pose as delegates to the UN from countries all over the world. Model UN is a good way to be a concerned global citizen and practice being globally aware and informed. In Model UN you can find students learning about diplomacy, international relations, and the United Nations. Model UN is an extracurricular activity in which students role play delegates in the United Nations and simulate UN committees. This activity takes place at Model UN conferences, which are organized by a high school or college Model UN club. This year they plan to participate in the Boston College Model UN Conference which is being held at the end of March. While there is the potential it would be an in-person conference in which they are given the pandemic, they will be remotely participating in the conference.

ROBOTICS

The robotics club meetings are underway in Mr. Gallants room. Preparing for competitions means there is always something to do! There are lots of new members and retiring seniors who need to pass on their knowledge to future generations of robotics club members. Once competitions begin, the environment "provides students with a STEM environment which otherwise would not exist inside the school," says George Gallagher. The demanding environment is a great way to let students approach analytical problems and figure out how to solve them.

Cohort B

DRAMA

The Drama Club is a club where students can perform on stage and/or join the tech crew to help build sets, stage manage, and do lighting or sound. The drama club usually presents student directed one acts in the fall, a full length play in the winter, a musical in the spring, and one or two one act competitions during the year. Come join the drama club and participate in the next coming performances!

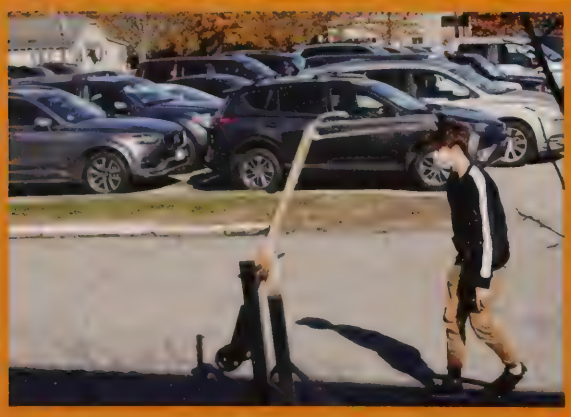
Engineering Projects



Engineering 2

Starting From Scratch

No Fear Engineer

by Cole Dione

In the medieval time period, trebuchets were the ultimate destruction weapon. Standing tall at 30 meters, the trebuchet would throw anything from livestock to stones, and destroy objects and buildings instantly. This siege engine often won battles. Castle walls were 10 feet thick and over 39 meters tall. With the trebuchet, however, it made the job look easy for attackers.

Andrew Beaudoin, a junior, is building a smaller (and safer) version of this menacing monster. To do so, Andrew is using simple materials like wood (2in x 4in) and a steel pipe to attach the two arms. Next, he'll connect the singular launching arm to the center of the pipe. Besides throwing rocks across fields, Andrew wants to get creative. "My project is about building a trebuchet and its purpose is to launch rocks. But our goal for the trebuchet once finished, is to launch eggs at a pan from approximately 60ft away. Precision is our goal. We are hoping that we can reach the pan and exceed our expectations."

Andrew didn't always enjoy building things and inventing. But he wanted to learn fast. As soon as he got his hands on his first phone, YouTube was his destination. "I got into working with my hands from watching this guy on YouTube. His channel is called The King of Random. He always uploaded cool, fun, and exciting new projects to his channel to inspire young audiences."

Now he's ready for the fields. Everything that came from The King of Random with all of his projects is now glued inside of his head and wants to get building. When Andrew moved up to high school, his first goal was to get as many shop classes as possible. That's when he found Engineering. For the past three years in that class Andrew knew the opportunities coming for him. "Engineering overall is my favorite class because of the hands on privilege. I say privilege because a lot of public schools don't have many hands on classes. I believe with this class, it can definitely help me in the future and open new opportunities."

For Andrew's future, things are looking solid. His mind is filled with new and brilliant ideas to help get him to where he wants. The trebuchet project was meant for Andrew to construct and to gather new ways of creating fun and unique builds. However, it most certainly won't be his last interesting build.

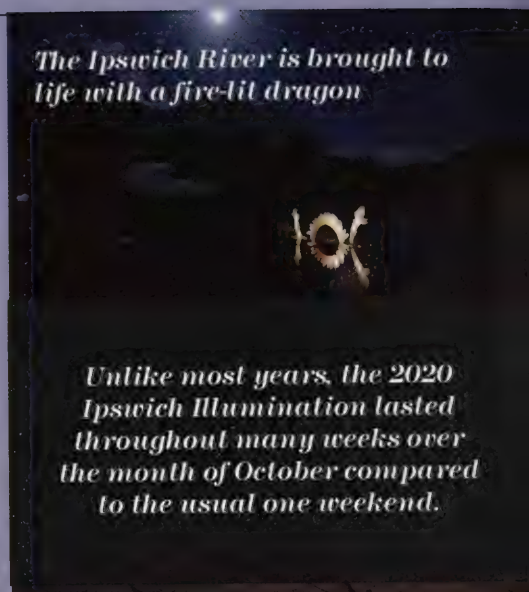
Illumination 2020: A Year of Innovation and Change

In past years, the Illumination boasts float trucks, lively music, and various events scattered through downtown attracting both locals and outsiders. However, this year is unusual due to lack of large group gatherings. The Illumination consists of smaller events, and has been advertised much less throughout town. And yet, the Illumination has continued to shine through the darkness of 2020 with bright lights, music, and laughter.



The Ipswich River is brought to life with a fire-lit dragon

Unlike most years, the 2020 Ipswich Illumination lasted throughout many weeks over the month of October compared to the usual one weekend.

Capturing Community

Most years, the Ipswich Illumination attracts a large stream of people, flooding downtown Ipswich with people from surrounding towns and cities. This year, attendee Olivia Whynott found the river dotted with locals rather than a large crowd.

"This year's illumination was centralized to mainly Ipswich community members," Olivia says. "It wasn't advertised in a way that many people knew about it"

COVID-19 has drastically changed life in Ipswich and Essex County, eliminating other popular events like the Topsfield Fair, something Olivia was nearly heartbroken by. "I attend a lot of fall events that have been canceled this year, so I was glad when the Illumination wasn't," Olivia said.

Much like her peers, Olivia has been greatly affected by the COVID-19 and is glad that the community is still safely holding positive and lively events like the Illumination.

"Junior year has been hard, but Ipswich's love and community makes it easier," Olivia said. "Art and music are great ways to find peace in this time of chaos."

An artist herself, Olivia enjoyed the scaled down but enjoyable events, specifically an artistic interpretation of the life of a fish, held by the Ipswich Moving Company. "It was great," Olivia said. "Everyone should get to experience that at least once in their life".

Surrounded by lights and music, Illumination transforms the barren Ipswich Riverwalk into a lively display of bright color. Locals are awed by a fiery river and are warmed by the love of a tight community - even in the chilled air.

"It was great to see so much life incorporated into this event," Olivia said. The Illumination continues to highlight the Ipswich Community's ability to come together with love and creativity even during trying times.

Ipswich Illumination

Come to Ipswich on certain weekends in October, and you'll be greeted with bonfires, candles and lively music. Ipswich takes much pride in its Ipswich Illumination, a gathering of community and light, lit by creative spirit and fire. In the past, the Illumination has drawn in thousands of visitors over the three days, sparking excitement as visitors as they gaze upon bonfires, visit food trucks, and perhaps even visit a haunted houses. Although fairly new, the Illumination has become tradition to many in Ipswich, and amid the chaos of 2020, it carries on, truly a bright light in our charming little town.

Community's Perspective

Student: Olivia Whynott
Is the Illumination a highlight of your fall?
The Illumination, along with other autumn events, is definitely a highlight of my fall, particularly because it is so unique to Ipswich.

How was your experience at the Illumination this year compared to past years?
It was definitely different, but also great, because it contained elements of the original illumination while providing an environment where people could socially distance.

Collaborator: Barta Hathaway
How does the Illumination represent our community?
"It's a celebration that's grown organically. Community participation in past years have represented Ipswich visual artists, dancers, musicians, and businesses. We present community members, not people from outside Ipswich."

How did the Illumination start?
"The Illumination started with three bonfires in 2009, when people in Ipswich were gathering as artists to do an annual art show. From the beginning, the poetry group would be part of the art show weekend, increasing in size with the contribution of music and food."

Who was involved with setting up/presenting at the events?
"It's always been a collaborative effort in the community. People would ask if they could host cookouts or play music at the event. Volunteer work, funds, and Ipswich Artists all greatly contributed to the event."

What was the theme or thought process behind this year's Illumination?
"The theme is generally about artists, the community and river. This year, the bonfires and river were taken over by the recreation department, with grants from the Cultural Council that funded concerts and other events. This year, there was a small theme regarding fish in the Ipswich Watershed, including a dance about a fish's life cycle and why the community should care about the river."

How successful do you feel this year's Illumination was?
"I felt that under the circumstances, it was a nice respite from politics and COVID, and just a nice time to hear music or see lights on the water. It was a pleasant respite during a difficult time."

The President's Address

Dear IHS Class of 2021,

Thank you for electing me to be your class president for three years. It has been a pleasure to work alongside all of my classmates throughout high school. There has never been a dull moment.

The class officers and I appreciate all of your support you have given us while organizing Spirit Week and planning fundraisers throughout the years. Thank you for buying socks, masks, roses, hot chocolate, and FunDip (just to name a few). The class officers and I have worked very hard to raise money so we can have the best senior week and prom that we deserve. Thank you for all of your energy you have brought to Spirit Week. Whenever we needed a volunteer for an event, you were all there to help. No question, the Class of 2021 has the best tug-o-war line-up (it pays off to have the entire football team in the grade).

2020 divided us, literally, into cohorts. It has been a long time since we have all been together. Although we might not see each other five days a week like we are used to, we are still there for each other. It is so exciting to see all of the orange tiger paws on the guidance windows with all of the college acceptances. Our days together as a grade have come to a close, but we all have bright futures ahead of us.

I wish everyone good luck in their future endeavors. Keep working hard and giving your all at everything you do. We will see each other around town, at the Thanksgiving football games, Zumi's and the beach.

Happy Graduation!

Sincerely, Gabrielle Ring

Advice for Underclassmen

1.) Do NOT sign up for emails for colleges when you take the PSATs.

2.) Find an emotional support teacher because you will be needing them.

3.) Don't sit on the red couch in E141 and don't ask why.

4.) Don't take anatomy if you want to be a nursing major.

5.) Don't take anything for granted.

6.) Don't take hard classes senior year, take the classes you know you will do well in.

7.) Go to every sports game you can, even if it's away.

8.) "Cheating" is bad, "Collaborating" is helpful. Know the difference.

9.) Don't get COVID.

10.) Fake it 'til you make it.

11.) These years fly by, so make the best out of every day.

12.) If you are given the option to have a night-time class study session -- TAKE IT.

13.) Get involved in as much as you can and keep yourself busy.

14.) Get a job early so you don't need to be working during college application season.

15.) Don't be a chowdah head.

It is not the critic who counts;

*not the man who points out how the strong man stumbles, or where the doer of deeds could have done them better. The credit belongs to the man who is actually in the arena, whose face is marred by dust and sweat and blood; who strives valiantly; who errs, who comes up short again and again, because there is no effort without error and shortcoming; but who does actually strive to do the deeds; who knows great enthusiasms, the great devotions; who spends himself in a worthy cause; who, at the best knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he fails, at least fails while daring greatly, so that his place shall never be with those cold and timid souls who neither know victory nor defeat.

Congratulations to our beautiful daughter Lily on her graduation. Bravery resides in every heart and yours is fierce and clear. Believe in yourself and keep marching to your own drum to capture your dreams. We are very proud and this quote we swear was written about you.

All our love- Mama, Baba, and Zoey too!

She was beautiful, but not like those girls in magazines. She was beautiful, for the way she thought. She was beautiful, for the sparkle in her eyes when she talked about something she loved. She was beautiful, for her ability to make other people smile, even if she was sad. No, she wasn't beautiful for something as temporary as her looks. She was beautiful, deep down to her soul. She is beautiful.
